Objectives

- Know the difference between a team and a workgroup.
- Understand what facilitation encompasses and its three principles.
- Know the steps to facilitating a successful meeting.
- The TWIST: Apply the

Interpersonal Flexibility Circle

31 hours

is the amount of time professionals lose each month in unproductive meetings!

EXERCISE 1

- Use the circle with no titles around the outside. You will be using two of them. For each of these “maps” you will be squaring the facilitator and circling yourself. You can have words with NO marks, one or the other, or both.
- 1. Think of the most difficult, frustrating, negative, stuck meeting where you were a participant and someone else was the facilitator. Map it.
- 2. Now think of a GREAT meeting that had great outcomes where you were a participant. Do the same thing. (Using a separate circle)

Climate/Environment

- Sets the general tone for participation
- Issues considered:
 - Comfort
 - Safety
 - Power

- Did the first facilitator set the tone for safety and engagement? Did the second? What did they do differently?

Logistics/Room Arrangement

- Provide for:
 - Comfortable seating
 - Places to hang charts
 - Refreshments
 - Audio Visual equipment
 - Etc.

- Was there a difference in these arrangements between the two?

Ground Rules

- May be referred to as the “Rules of Engagement”
- Common rules include:
 - One person speaks at a time
 - Raise your hand to be recognized/speak
 - Listen to the person currently talking
 - No mocking, ad hominem attacks, etc.
 - Be on time
 - Respect other team members
 - Did the first facilitator take the time to make sure that ground rules were set and that everyone agreed?

Facilitation

- Used to ensure successful meetings
 - Works with group processes to ensure meetings are well-run and reach successful consensus
 - Group Processes are a system of behaviors that occur within any social group
- Reaches its most effective form when utilized with high performance teams
 - “[A] small number of people with complementary skills who are committed to a common purpose, performance goals and approach for which they hold themselves mutually accountable.”*

5. High-performance Team: This is a group that meets all the conditions of real teams, and has members who are also deeply committed to one another's personal growth and success. That commitment usually transcends the team. The high-performance team significantly outperforms all other like teams, and outperforms all reasonable expectations given its membership. It is a powerful possibility and an excellent model for all real and potential teams.

1. Working Group: This is a group for which there is no significant incremental performance need or opportunity that would require it to become a team. The members interact primarily to share information, best practices, or perspectives and to make decisions to help each individual perform within his or her area of responsibility. Beyond that, there is no realistic or truly desired “small group” common purpose, incremental performance goals, or joint work-products that call for either a team approach or mutual accountability.

Working Group

Potential Team

3. Potential Team: This is a group for which there is a significant, incremental performance need, and that is really trying to improve its performance impact. Typically, however, it requires more clarity about purpose, goals, or work-products and more discipline in hammering out a common working approach. It has not yet established collective accountability. Potential teams abound in organizations. As our performance curve illustrates, when a team approach makes sense, the performance impact can be high. We believe the steepest performance gain comes between a potential team and a real team; but any movement up the slope is worth pursuing.

2. Pseudo-team: This is a group for which there could be a significant, incremental performance need or opportunity, but it has not focused on collective performance and is not really trying to achieve it. It has no interest in shaping a common purpose or set of performance goals, even though it may call itself a team. Pseudo-teams are the weakest of all groups in terms of performance impact. They almost always contribute less to company performance needs than working groups because their interactions detract from each member's individual performance without delivering any joint benefit. In pseudo-teams, the sum of the whole is less than the potential of the individual parts.

4. Real Team: This is a small number of people with complementary skills who are equally committed to a common purpose, goals, and working approach for which they hold themselves mutually accountable. Real teams are a basic unit of performance.

The Three Principles of Facilitation

1. The facilitator is there to move the process along, not to be the center of attention. The facilitator does not offer opinions, but draws out others.
2. The facilitator focuses on how people participate, not on the material of the meeting.
3. The facilitator is a neutral party.

Flexibility is the Key to Leadership

Good leaders are a healthy blend of principle and flexibility. There is power in being principled -- a clear symmetry of structure, consistency and unwavering values. There is also power in being flexible -- open, adaptable and resilient.

The paradox is that you need both to create true, sustainable power.

-Dr. Dusty Staub

Power is not being dominant. Power is getting the outcomes you want.

Real Power

Getting the outcomes you want in your business and personal life.

- Using the Interpersonal Flexibility Circle enables you to develop “strategic self awareness”
- Understanding and using the model will help you to be more INTENTIONAL and less AUTOMATIC.
- *You will be able to get unstuck and unhooked from old interpersonal patterns with BIG BRIGHT BUTTONS for Everyone to PUSH!!

Leadership = Interpersonal behavior

- A leader is not great because of who they are or what they know, but rather because of what people become in their presence. ~Author Unknown
- Our purpose is to become more aware and strategic about how we effect others and how they effect us to be better leaders/ facilitators.
- We can then create healthy organizations/ teams where people can thrive.

Exercise 2

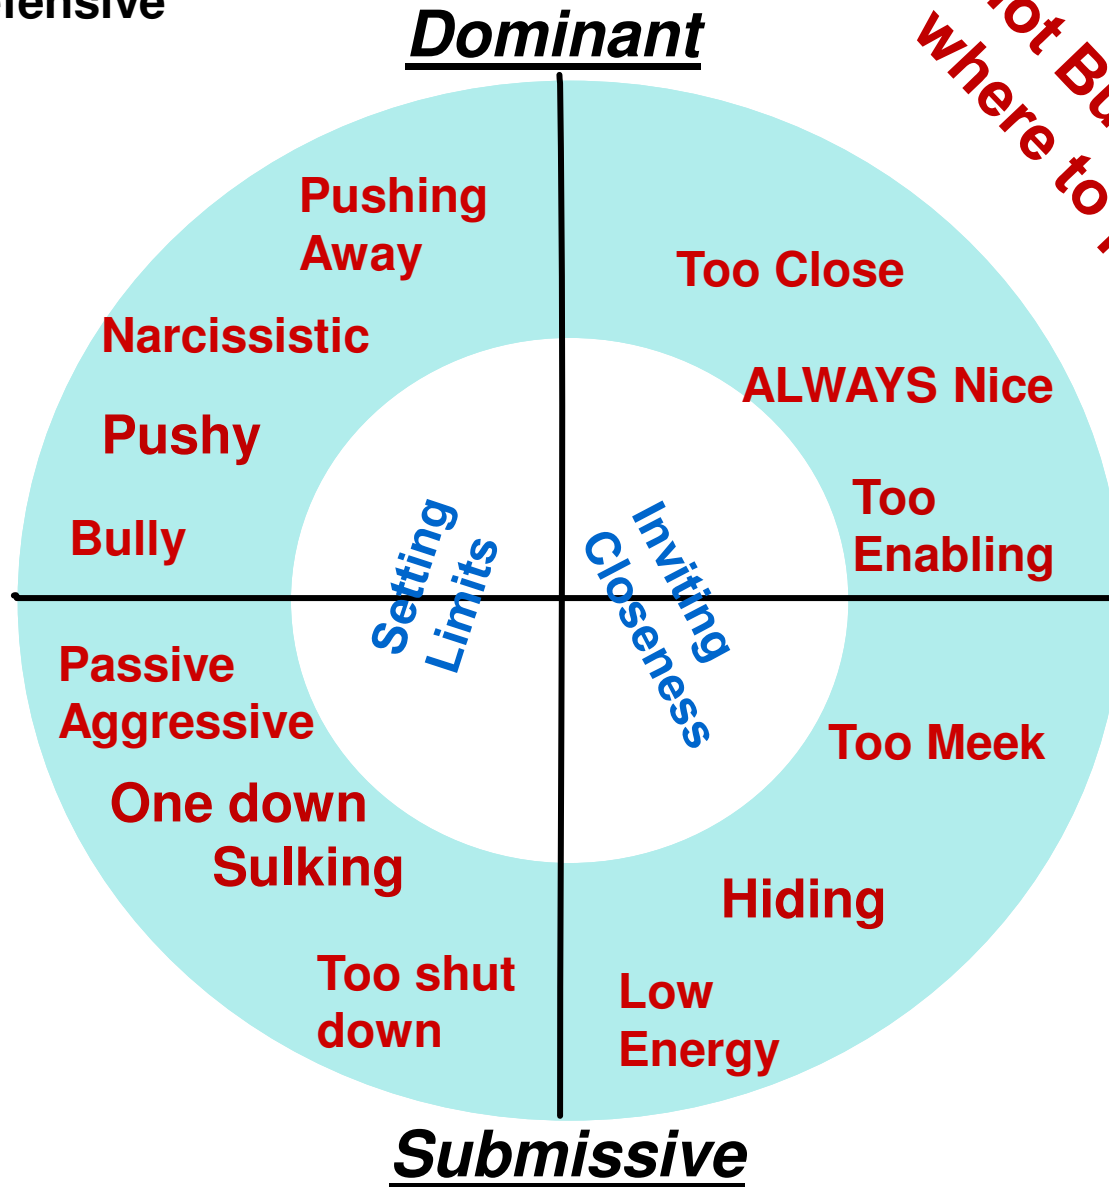

- Use one of the circles you were given that has no titles around the outside.
- Draw circles around all the words that apply to you when you feel confident, at peace, strong and engaged with life.
- Draw squares around all the words that apply to you when you feel anxious, unsure of yourself, and defensive.
- Notice the two patterns. In the next few minutes we will see how these patterns work in our lives.

Now look at all
three of the circles
you have mapped
as we look at what it all means.

Exercise 3

Work with 2-3 people around you.

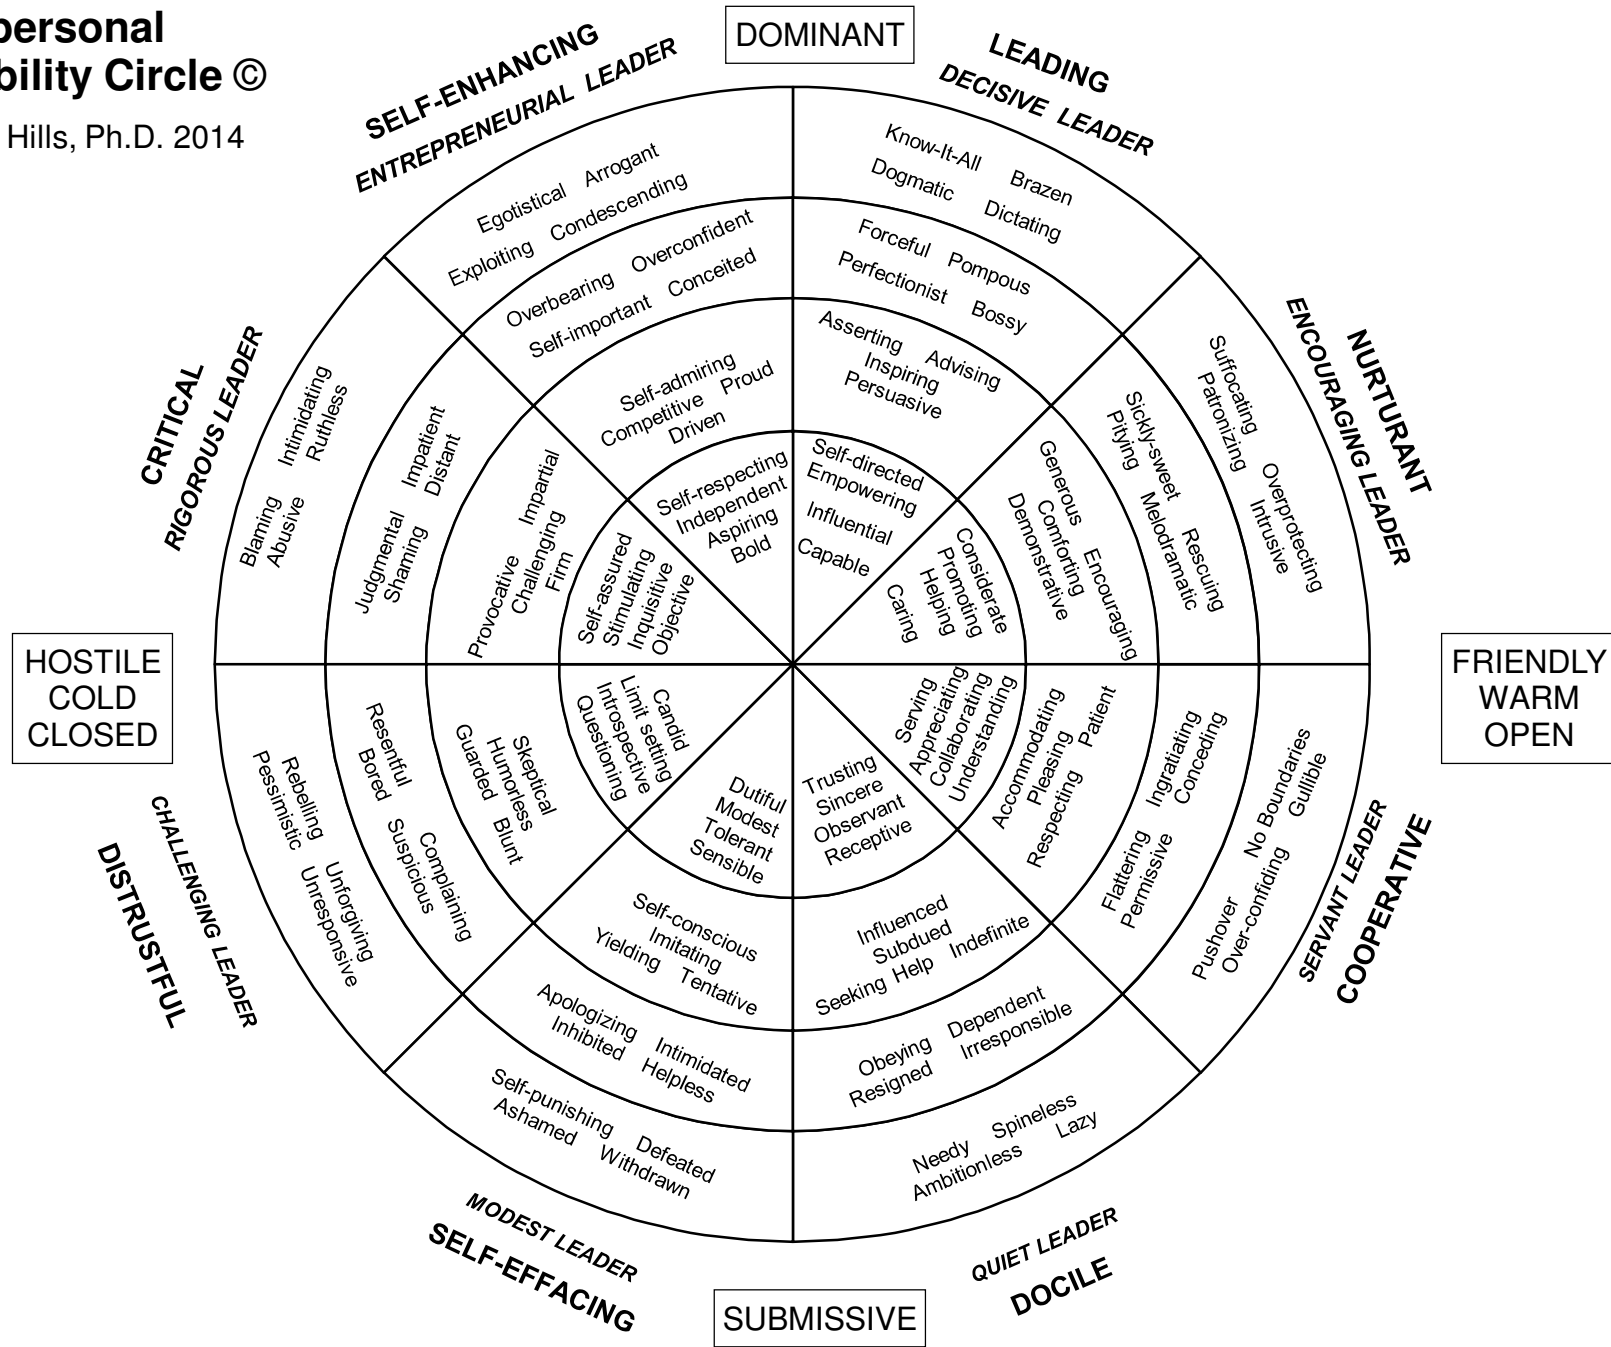

1. Checking the Three Principles of Facilitation.....what do you see going on in the two examples you have.
2. What outcomes did the team want? Did they match the facilitator's?
3. Look at the Intensity Circles. Where were you and the facilitator in each?
4. Where could you go to change the dynamic in the meeting?
5. One person share what your team saw.

Where are each of these tips on the circle?

Be FLEXIBLE. Move all the way around the circle. It is easier from the center.

Benefits/ Outcomes

Understanding the circle helps us to become scientists of our own and other's behavior.

An Interpersonal GPS to guide us through the land mines.

We will then be able to:

1. Take a breath
2. Assess where we are
3. Assess where the other person is
4. Choose our outcome
5. Go to where that outcome becomes more probable.

This has been a brief outline of the IFC.

In your businesses, the Interpersonal Flexibility Circle can provide a leadership template, a central organizing model for all managers and leaders, as it explains why other leadership models work!

It can help to eliminate the “model of the month” and create a common language of leadership.

Come and talk with me about your personal leadership or learn about how it can be used in your company at the the Circle Consulting Group Table.
